

The Initiative

While TaylorCrabbe Initiative (TCi) is a fledging young consultancy, it is made up of consultants who together have been engaged in the Forestry and Wildlife sector for close to a decade. The blend of personnel from diverse backgrounds will ensure that projects and products from TCi are accurate and realistic. TaylorCrabbe also provides cost-effective analysis and strategic proposals that would provide useful solutions. Consultants at TaylorCrabbe, have an enviable record in policy, legislative, and institutional reform in Ghana. We derive our strengths mainly from years of working with different sectors of the policy and legislative reform spectrum.

The premise of the Initiative was a realization that civil society organizations, especially organizations for environmental protection and natural resource conservation did not just lack legal knowledge in their field of practice but even where they did decide to put some effort in the acquisition of the said legal knowledge, they could seldom afford it. Taylor Crabbe, the Initiative therefore came in as a vehicle to access donor funds from both local and international groups who pay for these services that could otherwise not be afforded and bring a balance where productive service can be afforded at virtually no price at all. In the end, the Initiatives purpose is to, through the provision of these consultancy services, workshops and informative projects, arm civil society organizations with knowledge that facilitates proper, positive change.

To manage the finances of TCi and ensure value for money on projects, a finance officer has deployed a software that manages budgets and expenditures on various programmes that TCi undertakes.
